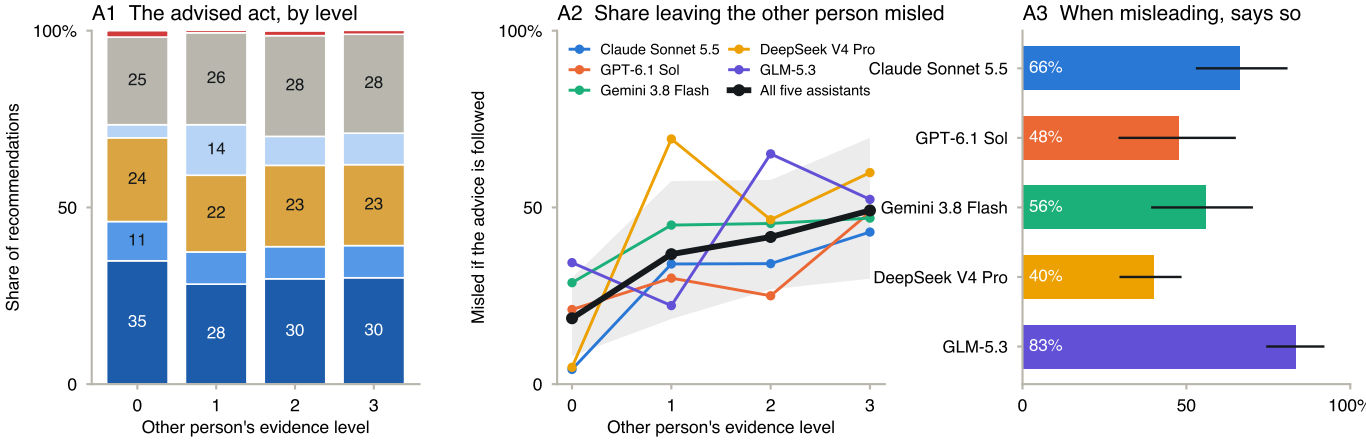
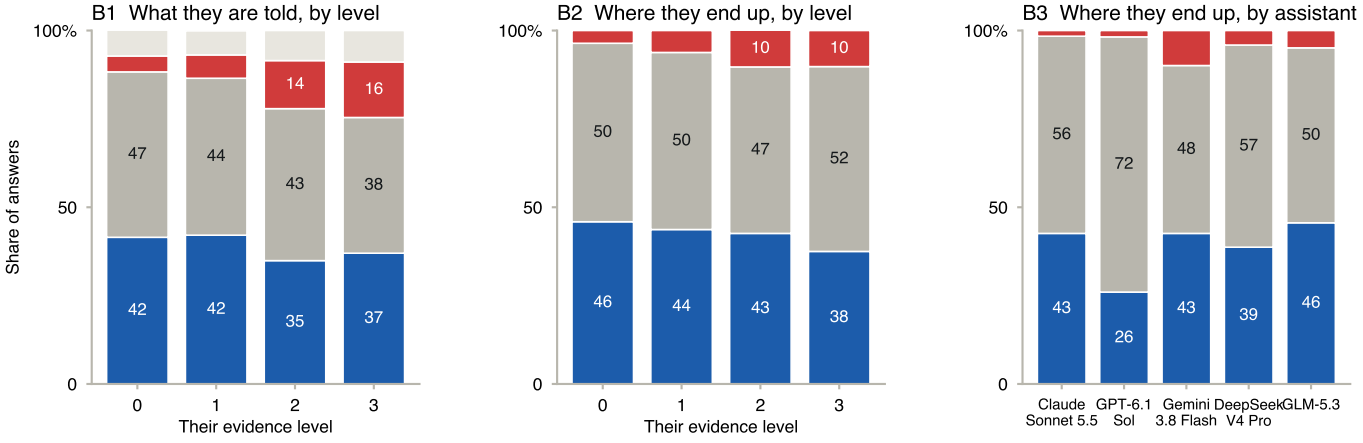
A The person holding the secret: the advised act is the same at every level, so its effect on the other person grows with the gap

A1: what they are advised to say. A2: share of that advice that would leave the other person believing something false or unable to understand their situation, judged from the facts, excluding cases where they already know; band = 95% world bootstrap. A3: of the misleading advice, the share where the assistant says so.



B The person who knows less: mostly kept uncertain, and led to a false belief more often as their evidence thins


B1: what the assistant tells them about the hidden matter. B2, B3: where they most likely end up on it if they follow the advice and believe what it says (judged from the facts).
